

Cyprus performs slightly better in EU annual healthcare index

Brussels, September 28, 2009

Cyprus climbed two positions among the European healthcare systems when the 2009 Euro Health Consumer Index (EHCI) was presented today in Brussels. The annual survey of EU healthcare ranked Cyprus 19th out of 33 countries. The Netherlands win for the second year with a record 863 points, followed by Denmark (819), last year's runner-up, newcomer Iceland (811) and Austria (795).

Cyprus scores 637 points from a potential 1,000 and generally performs rather well at waiting times but quite poorly when it comes to e-Health. Cyprus was ranked behind eastern countries such as the Czech Republic or Estonia but ahead of countries such as Hungary or Spain.

"Cyprus keeps proving that its healthcare standards are in par with EU average, as stated by the European Observatory", states Dr. Arne Björnberg, the Euro Health Consumer Index Director. "However, Cyprus shares with Greece a rather poor equity for access to healthcare, this still being more dependent on private payment than elsewhere in Europe."

This year's measurement indicates that the top performers in European healthcare start using healthcare information and choice to engage patients in the decision-making building a pressure from below for improvement. At the lower end of the ranking you find many countries stuck to old style healthcare, filled with hierarchies and lack of transparency. This gap challenges EU principles of equality and solidarity.

About the Index

The EHCI has become a measurement standard for European healthcare. It ranks 33 national European health care systems across 38 indicators, covering six areas that are key to the health consumer: Patients' rights and information, e-Health, Waiting times for treatment, Treatment outcomes, Range and reach of services provided and Access to medication. The Index is compiled from a combination of public statistics, patient polls and independent research conducted by the founders, Brussels-based think tank Health Consumer Powerhouse. The 2009 EHCI works under the auspices of the Swedish EU Presidency. The e-Health subcategory is developed in co-operation with the European Commission - DG Information Society and Media.
